

IS HE SHEEDY'S MURDERER?

McFarland, a Negro Barber of Lincoln, Confesses the Crime.

SAYS HE WAS BRIBED TO DO IT.

He implicates the Victim's Wife in the Plot, but There is no Corroborative Evidence to Prove It.

Lincoln, Neb., Jan. 18.—[Special to THE BE.]—Mrs. Sheedy and Harry Walstrom were arrested late this afternoon charged with complicity in the murder of John Sheedy.

The arrest of Monday McFarland, the negro barber, last night, on the charge of being the murderer of John Sheedy, resulted today in a full confession by the colored man. He tells one of the most revolting stories of intrigue and crime ever known in the history of the state.

McFarland confessed that he was the cowardly assassin who made the crime all over. Sheedy last Sunday night, but he said that it was not until he was prompted by the woman to do it, but a bribe of $20,000 offered by Mrs. Sheedy to the negro to murder her husband.

As is well known in Lincoln, Mrs. Sheedy left her husband, who was a poor carpenter, to marry Sheedy, then a man of great wealth, although old enough to be her father.

It appears that she has been anything but a true wife and of late it is alleged she has become infatuated with a dapper young fellow. But between her and her new found love stood the husband, and in order to get rid of this obstacle, she, as McFarland alleges, employed the negro to kill the man who had often befriended him.

In order, McFarland says, to more completely get the negro in her power she became intimately acquainted with him and today he exhibited to the mayor, chief of police and a detective most revolting evidences of his crime.

A few days before the murder McFarland was noticed by an acquaintance lurking in a dark alley on P street, just a block from Sheedy's home. In response to a query as to what he was doing there he gave a very suspicious answer.

On the day before the murder Mrs. Sheedy is said to have been in McFarland's barber shop and there it is believed the final arrangements were made for the assassination of the woman's husband.

The above story is based almost solely on the confession of McFarland and is of course susceptible of better proof. The city is full of reports concerning the crime and the police are making a careful examination before a definite conclusion as to the guilt or innocence of parties charged with complicity in the crime can be formed. The terrible charge against Mrs. Sheedy made by McFarland lacks confirmation and the public will withhold its judgment until all the facts are brought out and the lady's testimony has been heard.

The case with which the crime was committed was a heavy steel rod, covered with leather, and was of penitentiary make. It was formerly the property of Captain Carder of the police force, but was lost about a year ago. It finally found its way into Goldwater's pawn shop and was bought there by McFarland five days before the murder.

After the assault the murderer dropped the knife and this was the only clue on which the detectives had to work.

There remain still more important developments, as it is believed by the attending physicians that Sheedy did not die from the effects of the blows alone. The body is to be examined and a chemical analysis of the contents of the stomach made.

Mayor Graham, Chief of Police Melick and Detective Malone could scarcely believe their own ears as the murderer, McFarland, unfolded the devilish plot concocted by Mrs. Sheedy to have her own husband assassinated in his home.

Mrs. Sheedy, McFarland says, told him that she would prefer having her husband killed some other way than being shot. Accordingly, McFarland, after receiving the prize offered by the woman, decided to bring his benefactor. Accordingly he purchased the steel cane at Pawnbroker Goldwater's place. This weapon he showed to Mrs. Sheedy and after carefully examining the instrument of death, the woman expressed her approbation of this selection of a weapon that would do sure work in its deadly mission.

After the assault the murderer dropped the knife and this was the only clue on which the detectives had to work.

As above stated, Mrs. Sheedy went to McFarland's barber shop a week ago yesterday and there it is believed she made final arrangements for the destruction of her husband.

On the night of the murder, McFarland, in compliance with the orders of Mrs. Sheedy, slipped into the kitchen of Sheedy's home and remained concealed there. Again he weakened and implored the woman who was planning the assassination to let him out of the terrible job. Drawing a revolver, the desperate woman shoved it in the negro's face and threatened to kill him if he did not stay out of the way until the deed was done.

Sheedy then told the negro that Harry Walstrom of Buffalo, N. Y., the fellow who was in league with her, would readily perform the deed, but out of her love for Walstrom she did not wish him to do the work as long as she could buy plenty of others who were willing to do it for one-tenth the money offered by McFarland.

At this time Mrs. Sheedy held a revolver in her hand and the negro, between fright and fear that somebody else would get the $20,000 offered for the murder, decided to obey the orders of the woman.

Mrs. Sheedy then poured out an ordinary goblet over half full of whisky and gave it to the negro. He took it and drank it. Mrs. Sheedy then told him, he says, that if he would only beat her husband with sufficient violence so that he would have to go to bed she would attend to the finishing of the job. She then ordered the negro to go to the front door and as soon as her husband stepped out to brain him if possible. She said she would get Sheedy out of the house if she had to propose a walk.

"The rest of the story," says McFarland, "is only partially known. Just after Mr. Sheedy stepped out of the front door I was surprised to see that he turned toward me instead of toward the street. Mrs. Sheedy was on the other side of the door, and I believe that she closed the door suddenly and shoved Mr. Sheedy out on the porch. I then let Sheedy have it, but he pulled his gun and commenced shooting at me. I started to run, but I tumbled off the porch. This was the only thing that saved me, as Sheedy shot five or six times before I fairly got on my feet again. I was shot that I was killed, but I kept on running after I got up and I finally got away."

This ends the confession of the negro outside of a few minor points.

The Question Now Agitating the Troops at Pine Ridge.

GEN. MILES' ADDRESS TO THE SOLDIERS.

More Guns Given Up—Sullen Braves in Camp—Opposition in Washington to the Plans of General Miles.

PINE RIDGE, AGENCY, S. D. (via Rushville, Neb.), Jan. 18.—[Special Telegram to THE BE.]—This morning about a dozen more arms were turned in to Captain Pierce by the soldiers. They informed him that a systematic search was being made in their topos for weapons and that those found would be turned over tomorrow. The exact number of arms surrendered cannot be ascertained either at headquarters or from the soldiers, though the latter places the number at about five hundred. This is an increase over and above the number telegraphed yesterday.

At headquarters it is claimed that the arms turned over exceed in number any received by them under similar circumstances in the history of the army.

Last night thirteen shots were fired in the Indian camp, though nobody was hurt. Today the Indians were morose and gloomy. They had no welcome for the men who were to be relieved and carried to the reservation. The cause of a photographer's assistant. They had even less respect for the photographer who was compelled to confine his work to views of the camp and surroundings, the Indians refusing to be photographed. Notwithstanding the profession of friendship made by the alleged hostiles, some friendly Indians informed the correspondent that a number of the late troublemakers have still bad hearts and cannot be converted.

Each of the commands is hourly expecting to be relieved and carried to the reservation. There is a general feeling of discontent among the troops, who are weary of the campaign. The division commander desires to express his thanks and highest appreciation of the loyalty and soldierly service of the troops. The mention of individual names of officers or soldiers for meritorious conduct will be deferred until sufficient time has elapsed to make it possible to do so. It may be properly recognized and duly rewarded.

General Miles' address to the soldiers at Pine Ridge, Jan. 18.—The post says that Secretary Noble, talking of the policy to be pursued with the Indians hereafter, said that first of all they should be deprived of their firearms. An intellect that could master the mechanical intricacies of a Winchester rifle was capable of appreciating the noble simplicity of the bow and arrow. He proposed to give the hostile Sioux an opportunity to give up their arms in exchange for their lives. He said that the Indians in the United States under two-thirds are earning their own living. A NATURAL GAS FATALITY. Two Killed and Three Fatally Injured in an Explosion.

PINDOL, O., Jan. 18.—The first great disaster Flintley ever experienced from the use of natural gas occurred shortly before 2 o'clock this afternoon while the guests of the Hotel Marvin were waiting to be summoned to dinner.

This morning it was discovered that gas was escaping from some leading pipe somewhere into the dining room, and Mr. Marvin, owner of the building, with three plumbers spent the entire forenoon trying to locate the leak. About 10 o'clock they entered a chamber under the dining room, and an account of the explosion of gas that they could not breathe and it was suggested that a hole be sawed through the floor into the dining room in order to locate the leak. The hole was made one of the dining room girls, who was sweeping the floor, stepped upon a match and in an instant an explosion occurred which was so great that the building but killed two girls and maimed and injured a dozen other employees. The force of the explosion was so great that the building was blown away from its foundations and the square were demolished. Had the explosion occurred ten minutes later the loss of life would have been frightful, as nearly one hundred people were waiting to be called to dinner.

When the rescuing party began work in the debris the body of Katy Walters, a dining room girl, was seen, found, badly crushed. Ella Johnson, another waitress, was found under a mass of brick and mortar, but died in a short time.

THAYER'S CONDITION SERIOUS.

Physicians Report His Case Alarming on Account of His Age.

A FARMER DROWNED IN THE PLATTE.

Salter's Elevator at Dannebrog Burned to the Ground—Heavy Failure at Hastings—Other State News.

LINCOLN, Neb., Jan. 18.—[Special Telegram to THE BE.]—The condition of Governor Thayer is growing very serious. Today he grew worse, and tonight he is out of his head and is raving like a madman. His physicians state that his condition is alarming, owing to the age of the patient, who is seventy-one years old.

DROWNED IN THE PLATTE. MOORE, Butler, Neb., Jan. 18.—[Special Telegram to THE BE.]—Word was brought to town last night about 7 o'clock that a Bo hemian who had been stopping with a farmer just west of town had been taken out of the Platte river very nearly drowned. Dr. Redmond was summoned, who rendered the poor fellow all the assistance he could, but he only lived a short time. It is supposed that in attempting to cross the river he broke through the ice, and in falling had hurt himself in some way, as he had bled quite freely. He had managed to reach the shore and was unconscious. He was a sober, hard working man and had laid up quite a sum of money. He had no relatives in this city.

AN ELEVATOR BURNED. DANNEBROG, Neb., Jan. 18.—[Special Telegram to THE BE.]—The elevator at this place, owned by G. B. Salter, burned down at 11 o'clock last night. The town has no fire protection, and the fire was powerful enough to check the fire. The insurance is about $2,300, but still Mr. Salter is a heavy loser. Fully one thousand bushels of grain were destroyed. There was no clue to the origin of the fire, but it was a single enemy that would warrant the belief of incendiary spite. He calculates to rebuild in time for next spring, and will erect a temporary building in the meantime.

HEAVY HASTINGS FAILURE. HASTINGS, Neb., Jan. 18.—[Special Telegram to THE BE.]—The large retail clothing and tailoring establishment of James Brothers, confessed bankrupt at a late hour last night in the sum of $100,000, in favor of local creditors, and is now in the hands of the sheriff. The liabilities are variously estimated at from $30,000 to $40,000. The firm assigns their present predicament to a false belief in the commercial soundness of the effect that the firm had some time ago executed certain chattel mortgages, which is not true. The failure is depicted in commercial circles as the firm was regarded as one of the most substantial in the city.

SHE WHIPPED THE TEACHER. MOORE, Butler, Neb., Jan. 18.—[Special Telegram to THE BE.]—Josephine Estlin, living five miles southwest of this place, was arraigned before Judge Homer yesterday on a charge of having disturbed a school and whipping the teacher. WILL FIGHT THE WINNER. SULLIVAN REFUSES TO FIGHT TILL A NEXT BEST IS FOUND. CHICAGO, Jan. 18.—[Special Telegram to THE BE.]—Jack Corbett, the pugilist pride of the Pacific coast, occupied a box at the Windsor theater last night, where Sullivan was in "Honest Hearts and Willing Hands." He shook hands with the Boston man during the performance. The meeting between the pugilists stars was most cordial. To a reporter Corbett said that Sullivan should not fight him until he had found the rest of the aspirant for a go with the "big gun" and had tested his pugilistic ability in a fight with the speaker. Then, if he came off victorious, he could with some reason, claim the right to meet Sullivan.

"Sullivan," said Corbett, "is making money with his play and these fellows should let him alone."

Phil Lynch and Jimmy Wakeley were in the city today to negotiate with Sullivan for a fight with him for a purse of $30,000, but Sullivan flatly refused to make the proposed match. He said that Kilrain, Slavin and other aspirants should settle, so far as they were concerned, with the pugilist who was the best man and then he would consent to fight the winner and settle the question of the world's heavyweight championship.

IT WAS ANOTHER TAYLOR. INDIANOLA, Neb., Jan. 17.—To the Editor of THE BE: The following from Indianola appeared in your issue of January 15.

"To-day Rev. Taylor instituted proceedings against Carpenter of the Bartley Enterprise for libel. Many accusations have been published against Rev. Taylor."

The paragraph is ambiguous and misleading. The last sentence especially is likely to do harm. Your readers will infer that the Rev. Taylor alleged to reside at Indianola. I am the only Rev. Taylor residing at Indianola. I have no knowledge of, and no connection with, the suit. Your correspondent probably refers to an action between Rev. W. M. Taylor of Bartley and the Bartley Enterprise.

The trust, he said, has been unable to induce the J. N. Raymond company of Chicago and T. J. of New York to come into the fold, and a combination between these houses, which are among the largest manufacturers in the world, is looked for at any time. The moment they form such a combination, said the gentleman, the trust will commence to go to pieces.

PERISHED IN THE FLAMES.

An Unknown Man Burned and Charred Beyond Recognition.

MYSTERIOUS FIRE AND EXPLOSION.

The Wholesale Store of Klein & Spigle Destroyed, Resulting in a Loss of About Twelve Thousand Dollars.

At 9 o'clock last night people in the vicinity of Twenty-first and Cumine street were startled by the report of a heavy explosion followed by the crash of a falling building.

An instant later flames were seen shooting up from a heap of debris which a moment before was the wholesale and retail liquor store of Klein & Spigle. The explosion blew the front and side out of the wholesale store and the roof fell in. The fire companies from No. 1 and No. 6 engines were on the spot in a very few minutes and soon had the flames under control.

The buildings were one-story frame structures and burned like kindling wood. The wholesale store was on the corner and the retail adjoining. The former is a total wreck and the latter a mass of ruins. The stock was burned out, but the stock is only partially destroyed.

Some men who stood on the sidewalk opposite the building before the explosion occurred saw a man in the back room and they felt sure he must have been caught in the debris. The flames cleared away the rubbish from that part of the building and a rapidly as possible and the worst was soon realized. Close to the safe, near the door of the back room, lay a man burned so horribly that no one could recognize him. For a time it was believed the unfortunate man was one of the proprietors, but in half an hour both Klein and Spigle were forced to their homes and came to the scene of destruction. They failed to recognize the dead man.

Mr. Klein said he had no one sleeping in the store, and all his help were seen about the place after the fire, so the dead man could not be an employee.

The remains of a rather large man wearing congress shoes and a dark pair of pants. He had two dark keys and a small knife in his pocket. His clothing on the body and trousers was burned almost entirely away.

The coroner arrived at 10 o'clock and had the remains removed to Griggs' undertaking rooms, lower Fourth street, where an inquest will probably be held this afternoon.

The loss to Klein & Spigle will be quite heavy, as the stock was valued at $20,000, with but about $500 insurance. The buildings were not worth over $500.

The cause of the explosion remains a mystery. It is believed that it was a barrel of alcohol and others think it was dynamite. It was suggested that the man who lost his life might have gone in there to blow up the building, but no one has been able to get the full story. The safe, however, does not seem to have been tampered with, although the dead man was found close by. The explosion was heard ten blocks away.

A number of persons claim that a keg of powder was heard to explode in the building, but the proprietors both deny it.

THE MCGRATH INVESTIGATION. TORPEA, Kan., Jan. 18.—[Special Telegram to THE BE.]—The executive committee of the Torpea committee have received a letter from Frank McGrath and J. S. Coddling, a member of the committee, as to their complicity in the plot exposed by the letter of Congressman Turner ten days ago, will make its report tomorrow or Tuesday, unless McGrath and Coddling tender their resignations before that time. The committee has endeavored to have McGrath make some defense besides his unsupported general denial, but in this it has been unsuccessful and his refusal to do so has been accepted as a practical admission of his guilt. Besides the letter of Turner, the committee has made searching investigations of McGrath and Coddling, regarding their relations with republicans in connection with the senatorial campaign of last year. The committee expects some startling disclosures, which will not only implicate them but several prominent allies and republicans. Names have thus far not been mentioned with the scandal. McGrath has always stoutly maintained his innocence, but he has been overruled when the committee had investigated it.
